OBITER DICTUM

From the ABA Journal Daily Newsletter: [1] A woman is claiming that medical providers in Florida mishandled her sexual assault forensic examination in what her attorney describes as an unusual lawsuit. Kirsten Childress sought care from the emergency room in an Orlando Health, Inc. hospital within hours of being sexually assaulted in 2023, according to the complaint which was recently filed in the Middle District of Florida. Despite appearing with symptoms consistent with drug facilitated sexual assault, including memory loss, Childress alleges that the hospital and one of its physicians' assistants made improper testing decisions and incorrectly handled and documented the samples. Childress is also suing the Victims Service Center of Central Florida, where she was transferred for a forensic examination as well as one of its forensic nurses. According to the attorney who filed the medical negligence suit, she couldn't find records of anyone collecting or preserving her client's urine or blood samples for toxicology testing. Bloomberg Law reports that without those samples, a survivor has a harder time negating a consent defense. Sheridan Miyamoto, nurse practitioner and the director of the Sexual Assault Forensic Examination Telehealth Center, is an expert witness in Childress' case. Bloomberg Law reports that Miyamoto alleged in a pre-trial filing that the hospital breached federal and state standards of care by failing to take blood and urine samples. According to Childress' attorney, "The central issue here is whether the medical providers involved followed the prevailing standard of care when evaluating a patient who is presented shortly after a reported sexual assault with symptoms consistent with possible drug facilitated sexual activity. Childress' position is that the appropriate clinical steps were not taken." [2] A federal judge has ruled against a North Carolina woman who sued the state Board of Elections after posting a photo of her voting and was told to take it down or face prosecution. Susan Hogarth, of North Carolina, filed the lawsuit in 2024, after posting a selfie on X, that showed her holding her ballot while voting in the Libertarian primary. The State Board of Elections contacted her and asked her to take the post down, notifying her that it was a Class 1 misdemeanor. Ms. Hogarth sued, claiming that the state's laws prohibiting ballot photography violate the First Amendment. U.S. District Judge Louis Flanagan of the Eastern District of North Carolina disagreed with that First Amendment protections extend to ballot photography in a recently issued summary judgment order. According to the Court, polling places are a non-public forum, Judge Flanagan said in her order dismissing the case, and, as such, they are held to a more lenient standard in connection with First Amendment challenges opining further that the government is allowed to have content-based restrictions on speech, as long as they are reasonable restrictions and not because public officials oppose the speakers view. [3] The U.S. Supreme Court has cleared a path for Stephen K. Bannon's effort, backed by the Justice Department, to dismiss his conviction for defying a Congressional subpoena related to the January 6, 2021, assault on the U.S. Capitol. In a brief, unsigned order, the court vacated a judgment by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, upholding Bannon's conviction. The high court sent the case back to the appeals court for reconsideration considering a motion to dismiss that the Justice Department filed two months ago. It is likely that the motion to dismiss will be granted, although Bannon has already served his sentence in full during the appellate process.

#412-596-2626

Business Litigation Associate – Greenville, PA

McClelland Legal Search, a Pittsburgh-based legal recruiting agency, has been exclusively retained by a client seeking to add a Business Litigation Associate to its Greenville, Pennsylvania office.

This opportunity is not a typical small-market litigation role. The Greenville office is a recently established and growing location of a sophisticated, multi-state business and construction law practice. The firm itself is well-established and this is an opportunity to join at the ground level of a growing office, not a startup firm.

The firm is recognized as a Tier 1 Construction Law practice in the Akron, Ohio metropolitan area (Best Lawyers) and is distinguished by the depth and recognition of its attorneys, with more than half of its lawyers consistently listed in nationally recognized publications across business law and litigation practice areas.

The practice is both high-level and high-volume:

- Over $100 million annually in construction projects in active deals, litigation, and arbitration across multiple states
- More than $50 million annually in commercial real estate and asset acquisitions
- Ongoing representation of sophisticated business clients in complex, high-stakes matters

This associate will immediately be involved in significant litigation and arbitration matters in state and federal courts in Pennsylvania, working alongside experienced trial lawyers.

The firm is seeking an attorney with approximately 5+ years of litigation experience, though strong, motivated candidates with less experience who are committed to developing a career in business litigation will be considered. This is an excellent opportunity for an up-and-coming attorney who wants to learn how to handle complex litigation through meaningful responsibility, mentorship, and direct client exposure.

The practice focuses on business litigation, including:

- Contract and commercial disputes
- Construction litigation and arbitration

Employer-side employment disputes and agency investigations

This is a rare opportunity in Western Pennsylvania—outside of Pittsburgh and possibly Erie—to join a practice of this caliber while also having the ability to make a meaningful impact in a growing office environment. If you, or an attorney you know, are interested in learning more, we would welcome the opportunity to connect and share additional details.
