Obiter Dictum

From the ABA Journal Daily Newsletter :

[1] The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in a per curium opinion that prison officials don't have qualified immunity from a lawsuit filed by an inmate who claims he was held in a cell covered in "massive amounts" of feces based upon a determination that "no reasonable correctional officer could have concluded that, under the extreme circumstances of this case, it was constitutionally permissible to house the inmate in such deplorable, unsanitary conditions for such an extended period of time." This decision overruled the previous decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, which had granted qualified immunity in a case brought by a Texas inmate, even though the Court of Appeals held that the allegations, if proven, would violate the 8th Amendments ban on cruel and unusual punishment. [2] The U.S. Supreme Court recently vacated a ruling which permitted a Louisiana police officer to sue the organizer of a Black Lives Matter protest for serious injury caused when a different protestor threw a heavy object striking the officer. In its per curium opinion, the Supreme Court vacated a ruling against protest organizer DeRay Mckesson by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. The case, however, isn't over, as the Supreme Court remanded the matter to the Supreme Court of Louisiana to decide whether Mr. Mckesson breached a duty of care under Louisiana tort law and, if so, whether the officer alleged a risk that is within the duties or scope of that protection. [3] More than 85% of legal professionals surveyed by law.com said the upcoming election has affected their mental health, leading to symptoms which include stress, irritability and depression. Another survey found that the Covid-19 pandemic has worsened stress among law firm marketers and business development professionals. Asked to rate their stress on a level of 1 to 10, 80% of the respondents said their stress was a 7 or higher. [4] The U.S. Supreme Court again will face one of the country's most divisive constitutional issues, namely, does the First Amendment's protection of speech in religion provide a basis for violating laws that prohibit discrimination against gays and lesbians? The case, Fulton v. the City of Philadelphia, could provide a crucial signal both of a court that is skeptical of the constitutional protection of marriage equality and of a court prepared to greatly expand religious exemptions to general laws, including those forbidding discrimination.

LAWYERS CONCERNED FOR LAWYERS PENNSYLVANIA

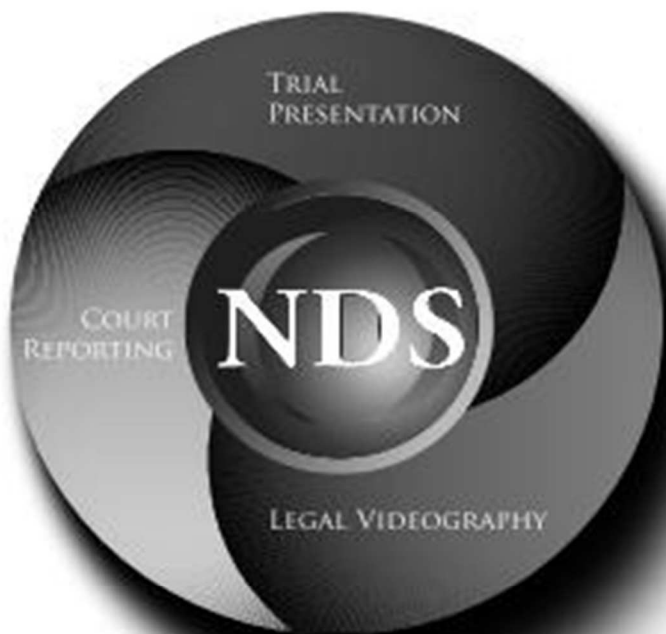

Are you overwhelmed by the stress of law practice or struggling with anxiety, grief, or symptoms of depression? Perhaps you are concerned about your increased use of medication (or other drugs) or alcohol to ‘take the edge off’? You are not alone.

LCL can help. Your call and all LCL Helpline services are 100% confidential.

Approximately one in four Pennsylvania lawyers will struggle with a significant mental health or substance use (i.e. problematic alcohol or other drug use) condition during his or her career. Many of these conditions are chronic and progressive – they do not resolve on their own. They often lead to worsening health, strained relationships, and/or diminished professional competence. It is imperative for an attorney to receive the help he or she needs in order to mitigate these consequences and restore him or her to health and personal and professional well-being.
